INDIA METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT*Poona, the 8th January 1950*

Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in Northwest India in January, February and March 1950.

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of winter precipitation in northwest India during January to March from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are in the order of decreasing reliability, the following:

- (1) Mean pressure in December in South America
- (2) The westerly component of the upper winds over northern India at a height of 3 to 5 miles (September second half and October first half)
- (3) December rain in western region comprising Kashmir, Baluchistan and Iran.
- (4) December rain at Port Blair.

The linear regression equation formed with these factors gives a multiple correlation coefficient of 0.69.

2. Division 'Northwest India'

In this memorandum 'Northwest India' is taken to consist of Kashmir, the United Provinces, the Punjab,

Rajasthan, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Cutch. In as much, however, as the rainfall in March in the United Provinces is said to be prejudicial rather than favourable to the crops, this rainfall is not taken into consideration.

3. Data.

The relevant data for the present season are—

- (1) South American w.r.s. u.e—Pressure was 1.5 m.m. below normal in December.
2. The high level winds over northern India—The westerly component of the upper winds was very weak over New Delhi and Gwalior.
- (3) The western rain was considerably below normal in December.
- (4) December rainfall at Port Blair was in large deficit.

4. Conclusion.

This year all the factors are unfavourable excepting Port Blair rain. The indications are that there is a fair to one chance that the combined rainfall and snowfall in northwest India during January to March this year will be appreciably below normal.
